Farmer-Laborites About Ready to Surrender — May Use Force to Eject Communists

Communists Plan to Nominate McDonald and Bouch After Inviting LaFollette to Run

BY KENNETH CLARK

CONVENTION HALL, St. Paul, Minn., June 18—The third party Farmer-Labor-Progressive convention here, which has steered none too steady a course on its maiden run, appeared headed straight for destruction today.

As the convention entered its second day, amid, scenes of feverish excitement, with Communists and Anti-Communists hurling vituperative oaths at each other, across the floor is was clearly evident that little short of miracle could save the meeting from a wreck.

The Communists admittedly held the whip. They struck out with a powerful offensive that virtually took all control away from William Mahoney, of St. Paul, who first decided to bar the radicals and then offered no objection to their being seated.

Today Mahoney, a trim gray locked, mild-mannered man, looked as if he had aged two score years over night. He was weary ad haggard and drawn from all night conference. His face, usual-

Union Men Employed at Theatre Back at Work; Protest Is Successful

Agreement Reached When Contractors Call Off Non-Union Men, Substitute Union

A dozen or more carpenters resumed work on the Sixth Street theatre Wednesday morning after having been idle for exactly a week because of a protest strike, called when non-union painters, employed by the Bryant brothers firm of Columbus, started to work at the theatre building with local union men. The local craftsmen refused to work with "open shop" workmen.

An agreement between the carpenter's union and the Columbus firm was reached Tuesday under the direction of Arnold Bill, Cleveland, an officer in the national organization, whose duties it is to settle such differences.

It is understood that Bryant Brothers have agreed to send union painters to succeed the non-union workmen, to complete their contract with the theatre management. The non-union men were called off at the end of last week, and it is believed union men will take up their unfinished work at once.

Several plumbers, electricians and plasterers, who stopped work at the same time the carpenters quit, had not resumed work Wednesday, but it is understood they will come back.

The theatre is undergoing a complete change, and will be completed early this fall.

BOYS FORCE ENTRANCE TO CHURCH

Deputy Stuart Arrests Trio; Stole Miscellaneous Articles, But All Are Recovered

John Halsey, 19, Edwin Halsey, 17, and William Dillinger, 19, Zanesville youths were taken into custody early this forenoon by Deputy Sheriff James Stewart and H. B. Ross of Adamsville, who followed the boys to this city after, it is alleged, they broke into the New Hope Luther church, near Adamsville, Muskingum-co, last Monday night and took away part of the church property.

Under questioning, the boys gave the above names and ages. They told Deputy Stuart their homes were in Zanesville, and that they have been working in New Lexington.

Their loot was not of great value. It included one pair of shears, a box of candles, a tablet, seven gold badges, a mirror, a box of matches, a package of Sunday School cards and three silver memorial plates. The latter articles had been pried from the bottom of collection plates where Ross explained, they had been placed by a member of the church in honor of her dead husband. The boys said they had thrown these away, The other property was recovered.

Ross, who is from Adamsville, was aided, by information obtained along the way, to follow the boys in this direction. He overtook them south of Coshocton on the Conesville road He declared that probably no charges will be filed against the boys since the articles were recovered.

Zanesville officers were notified, however, and the youths may be taken back to Zanesville.

China Disavows Trusteeship of Eastern Railway

WASHINGTON, June 18.—The state department was surprised today when it was handed a note from the Chinese government in which China disavows all responsibility for the trusteeship of the Chinese Eastern Railway imposed upon it by the allies, who furnished money for its operation, when the Bolshevists gained control of Russia.

The note declared the entire matter was one between Soviet Russia and China, now that these two countries had resumed diplomatic relations.

Hughes Replies to His Critics

AMHERST, Mass., June 18. — Secretary of State Charles E Hughes, speaking at the alumni luncheon of Amherst college here today, flung down the gauntlet to foes of American diplomacy who have charged the state department with being an agency of "international bankers and concession hunters."

"There are those," he said, "who will repeat the false statement that the position of this government at Lausanne was determined by the Chester concession, a statement which I have repeatedly and unequivocally denied. This government took no part in securing that concession; this government made no barter of its rights for this or any other concession

"Then you will find some of our business men asserting that if we backed up more actively our interests abroad, as it is said some governments do, they would have greater success However, I see no indication of any relative failure of our legitimate business interests abroad.

"Loans to foreign governments are made on the investment basis Our people have resources which can be used in aiding productive enterprises in other countries That is on important way to help. But it is the help of the private enterprise and is extended only as a basis of private negotiation and investment. This government has no control over such enterprises."

FRECKLE CONTEST OPENS WITH RED-HEADS LEADING

In spite of complaints of a backward season, some real crops of freckles were exhibited by the boys who contested for the honor of being known as the 1924 Champion Freckle-Raiser of Coshocton, Wednesday morning.

The freckle farmers met at the Utahna theater at 10 o'clock, and after 12 of them had been nominated for candidates for the honor, the whole bunch of about 30 boys entered the theater as guests of the management, for an interesting program of pictures.

Red-heads proved to be the owners of the majority of freckles, altho there were several of the boys not in that class, who offered still competition. A group picture of the boys was first taken, and then after the show, the 12 candidates for election as Champion went to the Riley studio, where individual pictures were taken.

From the list of 12, six will be chosen. Their pictures will be printed in the Tribune, and from the six the winners of first and second place in the contest will be chosen.

Many Wheat, Oat and Corn Fields Ruined; Hay in Lowlands Is Sanded

Coshocton-co's corn crop this season will be below an average unless unusually favorable weather conditions prevail in the next three months.

The prolonged wet weather made it impossible to plant much of the corn in the county, and the recent flood has made replanting necessary in many instances. Considerable corn ground in the county remains even yet to be plowed. Some fields will no doubt have to be abandoned, while others will perhaps be put in soy beans. Quite a number of fields on the river bottoms near Coshocton, in some of which the planted corn was entirely killed by the recent inundation, are not yet in condition to work.

Corn planted in June can hardly be expected to mature before the middle of September. At this time frost often occurs in Coshocton-co, causing soft corn and otherwise harming the expected yield.

Professor Jay B. Park, head of the department of farm crops at Ohio State University, says that Ohio's corn crop this season will be the poorest in years unless unusually hot and dry weather is experienced in August and September. "The situation," he said yesterday, "does not look at all good if we are to have average weather from now on."

In addition to the retardation of planting, by the wet season, a flood could not have come at a less desirable time, local farmers say. Practically all crops have been materially injured. Much wheat and oats have been ruined, while meadows that have been under water will produce crops of sanded hay, almost useless.

SENATE IS SCENE OF FIST FIGHT

PROVIDENCE, R I, June 18. — Deputy sheriffs were stationed in Rhode Island's senate chamber today to prevent any further disagreement among the solons that might result in their coming to blows Yesterday's melees resulted from an attempt on the part of Senator Arthur A Sherman, Republican to seize control of the body in the absence of Lieut Gov Felix Toupin, Democrat.

When Sherman called the body to order, Democrats objected and prevented the clerk of the senate from calling the roll From oratorical gestures, fists suddenly were used for more belligerent purposes

Spectators added to the disorder and in a few seconds the chamber was in an uproar Senator Sherman's attempt at a coup, similar to that successfully played recently by the Democrats at a rump session when Republican members walked out, was a failure.

Councilmen and Mayor Say Move Will Result in Disastrous Delay

Seven Petitions Out Today; 800 Signatures Are Required to Call for Vote

Indignation that some citizens were endeavoring to interfere with the operation of the occupational tax here by means of a referendum, but no fear that the proposal would be defeated if it is called to a vote, was expressed by various members of the city council and Mayor Harry B Heaton, in interviews Wednesday.

Seven petitions are out.

The occupational tax measure has been passed by the city council, and will become effective on June 21, unless the effort to call a referendum is successful.

Referendum petitions were drawn up, and put into circulation Tuesday It must be signed by approximately 800 voters before a referendum on the occupational tax proposal can be called.

Opponents of the tax declare if it once becomes effective it will probably remain in operation year after year, instead of being simply an emergency measude, as is intended. They also fear that the measure will postpone the re-appraisement of real property in the county. By calling a referendum, they hope to defeat it.

The question would not be submitted to the voters until November 4, and even if it passed then,

M'ADOO MUST BUCK ENTIRE FIELD ALONE

His Strength and Tactics Are Driving Other Candidates to Unite Against Him

RULES FIGHT FIRST

Will Test McAdoo's Strength as Compared with that of the Entire Opposition

BY GEORGE R. HOLMES

NEW YORK, June 18—It's McAdoo against the field.

Backed by one of the strongest organizations that any candidate ever took into a national convention, with far more delegates than any other candidate possesses, and supremely confident of their ability, not only to nominate their man, but, also, to control the convention machinery, the McAdoo managers, served notice today they are going into Madison Square Garden next Tuesday, prepared to give battle on everything from platform to rules.

The formidable McAdoo strength and tactics are such that all opposing candidates are being driven into each other's arms for sheer self protection in the pre-convention maneuvering here.

The fight over the rules will be the first number on the Garden's card of bouts, it appeared today.

The McAdoo managers will support, if they do not actually lead, a fight to abrogate the rules that requires a winning candidate to obtain two-thirds of the delegates

Will Officially Notify Coolidge and Dawes Later

By CARL W. HARRIS

CHICAGO, June 17.—President Coolidge will learn officially about July 20 that he is the Republican candidate for president, and General Charles G. Dawes will find out that he is vice-presidential running mate probably July 27, it was announced here today by William Butler, national Republican chairman, in his first interview with newspapermen since his arrival.

General Dawes, Butler said, will hold his fire in the campaign until after he finds out officially that he has been nominated.

"I shall spend most of my time here during the campaign," said Butler "but I expect to make an extended trip to get in touch with state organizations and national committeemen and will spend a little time in New York.

"We are now organizing the speaking campaign but the opening date or place has not been decided upon."

General Dawes again denied himself to the newspapermen today. Thru his secretary he sent back word that he didn't have a thing to say—not a "wang-banged thing."

Butler declined to comment upon the statement of C. Bascom Slemp, President Coolidge's secretary that there would be an advisery committee.

While Butler was meeting press representatives, William Gibbs McAdoo, here enroute to the national Democratic convention in New York, commented briefly on the results of the Cleveland convention.

"The lines are plainly drawn" said Mr. McAdoo, "between the reactionary platform chosen at Cleveland, and progress. It makes the tasks of the Democrats much easier."

Mr. McAdoo expects to be nominated at New York. He declared himself to be the only positive candidate. The others, he said, are in the race to "block McAdoo."

Killing for a Thrill Not New; Leopold Blase

BL HELEN FOX

CHICAGO, June 17.—From New York! Nathan Leopold raised bored eyebrows.

"They come from all over the world to see us."

The boy killers of little Robert Franks are in the spotlight of the world. But perhaps Leopold's assurance is a little exaggerated. The crime for which young Leopold and younger Loeb will be brot to trial August 4 is unusual in criminal annals, but it is not original.

The classics which Leopold read with morbid interest, furnished him many examples of the "intellectual" crime, but killing for a thrill is not new even in modern times.

Neither boy admits having read "for art's sake" a horror story written three years ago by Ted Robbins. Yet so close a parallel is it to the crime and their philosophy, with its hero who "killed for art's sake," that it might have furnished for the slaying of the Franks boy. In the story, Burgess Martin, its principal character, seeks the sensations of murder that he may better write his horor stories and illustrate them with ghrisly paintings. Leopold, according to his own assertions, killed as an experiment "and for a thrill."

M'Adoo Must

—in this case 732. The rule has stood since Jackson's day and it will be a stiff contest.

Abolition of the rule will be opposed by every candidacy opposed to McAdoo. The supporters of Governor Al Smith will fight it because they are confident that, while McAdoo at one time or another, may succeed in approaching or getting a majority of the convention, he can never obtain 732 of the 1096 delegates.

The supporters of every dark horse candidate in the Democratic stable will fight, not because they love Al Smith, but because their only hope lies in a deadlocked convention and the inevitable compromise.

Judge David Ladd Rockwell, director general of the McAdoo campaign, estimated that McAdoo will have 30 members on the rules committee of 54 members. This is enough to bring in a majority report—if they all hang together. If they don't stick together and if the rules committee reports in favor of retaining the two-thirds rule, then the McAdoo people may force a floor fight on a minority report, or bide their time until a deadlock is reached and then demand a reconsideration of the rules.

Despite the insistence of the McAdoo managers that the rule is archaic, obsolete and otherwise undesirable, the opinion prevails among the older leaders of the party that the rule is a good one and will withstand this attack as it withstood others in the past.

Irrespective of the fate of this particular rule, the fight over it will affect the clean cut test of strength between the McAdoo cohorts and the field.

McAdoo's managers are counting on approximately 450 delegates on the first ballot, 500 on the second or third, and small but steady additions thereafter as favorite sons begin to drop out of the heavy going. A majority is 549.

On the other hand, Smith's managers are figuring on an initial strength of about 300. New York and Pennsylvania alone, are counted on to furnish more than half of this number, with Wisconsin, Illinois, Rhode Island, Minnesota, Massachusetts and Connecticut furnishing the balance. It takes but little more, 365, to constitute a deadlocking one-third.

The Underwood contingent, mustering less than 100, and the dark horses and favorite sons—John W. Davis of West Virginia, Samuel M. Ralston, of Indiana, Carter Glass of Virginia, David F. Houston, of Texas and New York and Gov. George S. Silzer, of New Jersey, among others—will take care of a number sufficiently large to block a two-thirds vote and even possibly, a majority.

The Underwood and Smith forces, alone, can count on approximately 400 delegates in the early balloting and this strength, their managers solemnly assert, will never, never, never go to McAdoo.

Hence the importance of the rules fight.

The issue is as closely drawn as one ever was in a national convention. It is comparable, in this respect, to the Clark-Wilson struggle at Baltimore, in which Clark obtained a majority but never the required two-thirds.

The Baltimore precedent is one, incidentally, that anti-McAdoo forces are relying on heavily in the rules fight. They point out that had there been no two-thirds rule at Baltimore, McAdoo's father-in-law would not have been president and the whole course of the world's history might have been changed thereby.

Substantial agreement has been reached among the leaders here for Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana, one of the senate's chief investigators, as permanent chairman.

The McAdoo people will put forward Governor W. J. Fields, of Kentucky, as chairman of the powerful rules committee, and Homer S. Cummings, of Connecticut, as chairman of the platform committee. Both will be fought by the Smith-Underwood people.

DAWES PLANS WHIRLWIND CAMPAIGN.

This is the latest posed photograph of General Charles Gates Dawes, of Chicago, Republican Vice-Presidential candidate, who plans a whirlwind campaign all over the country.

South African Election Goes Against Smuts

CAPETOWN, South Africa, June 18—Former Premier General Jan Christian Smuts and the South African party have been defeated in the Union of South Africa general election, upon the face of incomplete returns received here today. Owing to the isolation of large districts and the lack of communication it probably will be a day or two before the final result is officially known.

The powerful Nationalist-Labor party coalition succeeded in winning in districts where the South African party seemed secure.

Leaders of the Nationalist-Labor group claim they will dominate the next parliament. Notable gains were made by the Laborites who virtually swept the Rand-South Africa's great mining district.

From present indications the Nationalist-Labor coalition will have a working majority in parliament even if General Smut's South African party should hold the most seats of any individual political organization.

General Hertzog, leader of the opposition against General Smuts, is expected to be the next premier, but the gain in strength on the part of the Labor party may compel the selection of Colonel Crosswell, Laborite leader, for this post. Hertzog is one of the Nationalist leaders.

A table compiled at noon showed the following incomplete results—South Africans 25, Laborites 18, Nationalists 12, Independents 1. General Smuts lost his own seat in parliament which J. Hay, a laborite, won. This was a severe blow to Smuts' own prestige as well as that of his party.

Victory of the Nationalist-Laborite group probably will revive agitation for South African Independents. Extremists among the secessionists want to establish a republic.

Proper Sprays for Vegetables Are Described

Confused by the number of patent insecticides and fungicides on the market, many fruit and truck growers in Ohio seem unable to control insects when an emergency comes, County Agent Musgrove said today.

For their use T. H. Parks, extension entomologist at the Ohio State University, submits these suggestions:

"For chewing insects, powdered arsenate of lead applied as a dust or spray is most serviceable. For suckling insects a tobacco solution is best. In the tobacco solution nicotine sulphate is the killing agent. It must be brot in contact with the insect's body.

"A combination insecticide and fungicide is often economical. Most prepared fungicides are inferior to home-made Bordeaux in adhesiveness. Factory - prepared combination sprays have a place in the small garden, provided the grower is careful.

"Nicotine dusts have value in controlling plant lice on low gorwing vegetation difficult to cover with spray. Dusts must be fresh and with a nicotine content of from two to six percent. To apply use a good blower gun, preferably in the heat of the day and when the atmosphere is free from air currents.

"Bordeaux dusts are not recommended for use in controlling vegetable diseases in Ohio."

Burke Attacks Road Frauds in Opening Speech

ORRVILLE, O., June 18.—Flaying dishonesty in road contracts, injustice in apportioning taxes and inefficiency in spending the peoples money, state Senator J. F. Burke, of Elyria, candidate for the Republican nomination for governor, today opened an eight weeks campaign, designed to take him into every section of Ohio before the primaries to be held August 12.

Bnurke arrived here accompanied by a caravan of autos, all of which bore "Burke for Governor" banners. In one of the machines a unafone, which can be heard for a radius of a half mile, had been installed. The unafone will broadcast the candidate's speeches.

Burke pledged himself, if nominated and elected, to take the public welfare law enforcement and highway departments out of politics and declared that no appointments should be made to these places as a reward of party service.

Rainy Weather Will Increase Soy Bean Crop

ESoy beans will perhaps be used more extensively as a Coshocton-co crop this season than in any previous year, formers say.

Numerous fields that were intended for corn and have not yet been planted, due to wet weather, will be put in beans; and some fields on which the planted corn has been killed by the recent overflow will be planted beans. Moreover, with prospects for a comparatively short clover crop, soybeans will be the logical crop for an emergency legume, crops men at the Ohio State University have pointed out.

John Lapp and son, Archie of Conesville, grow soy beans for hay, with corn for silage, and with corn to hog off. They use the Hollybrook variety for all purposes. The Lapps drill their beans solid in rows, in order that they may be cultivated. No inoculation is used. Mr. Lapp says they have experienced no difficulty in growing satisfactory crops of beans on their river bottom land without inoculation.

They cure their bean hay in the windrow, turning with a side-delivery rake when necessary. Mr. Lapp says that altho soy beans are more difficult to cure than other hay crops they can stand more moisture without impairing their feed value.

The Lapps have sowed soy beans in their corn for hogging off for a number of years. They prefer a late bean on which the foliage will yet be green and good for forage just before the corn is ripe. At this time the beans will not be quite ripe and, along with the green leaves, will all be gotten, without shattering, by the hogs.

M.A. Crile, of Chili, is, on the other hand, a hill farmer who values soy beans, as a feed for his herd of high grade purebred Holstein cows. He uses beans only for hay, believing that corn makes better silage alone than with beans, and that beans make hay of so superior quality that special attention should be given to growing them for that use.

Mr. Crile uses the Hollybrook variety, drilling them solid with a grain drill. No difficulty is experienced with weeds, the beans growing sufficiently rapid, he says, to keep them down. He inoculates with the "muddy water" method. This year he expects to use acid phosphate liberally, and to put on two tons of lime to the acre on the six-acre field he is now getting ready to sow.

His hay is cured in the handstacks. If wet weather sets in the handstacks are not touched. Then when favorable weather comes they are opened for a short time before hauling to the barns. Like Mr. Lapp, Mr. Crile says soy beans can withstand a lot of rain without serious injury to them resulting. One year, he states, his bean handstacks stood thru two weeks of wet weather, and yet made hay that was entirely cleaned up by his cows.

Fascisti Patrol Streets; Police Hunt Murderers

ROME, June 18—Black-shirted Fascisti militiamen patrolled the streets today while police searched for further participants in the kidnaping and killing of Socialist Deputy Giacomo Matteotti and government leaders conferred to determine whether there should be further revision in the Mussolini cabinet.

Signor Finzi, former chief of the government press bureau, sent a letter to the Giornale D'Italia denying he had financed anti-Socialist newspapers. He charged that the policy of the press bureau was controlled by Premier Mussolini.

Under Secretary Acerbe issued a statement saying, if there were abuses in the press bureau, he was not in any way responsible. If as rumored, Premier Mussolini offered his resignation to King Victor Emmanuel, it has not been accepted. The Mussolini cabinet is functioning as usual.

Police were reported to have found a trunk belonging to the leader of the Matteiotti kidnaping band, containing a blood-stained knife and pieces of blood-soaked cloth. Investigation is under way to determine if the cloth is part of the clothing worn by the Socialist deputy when he was seized and carried off by five men on June 9.

Gov't Ownership Brings a Lower Telephone Rate

EDMONTON, Alta., June 18. — One thousand cities, towns and villages in Alberta are now connected by the lines of government-owned telephone system, according to the annual report of the Hon. V. W. Smith, minister of railways and telephones.

The Alberta system is linked up with 455 towns in Saskatchewan, 239 in Manitoba and seventy-eight in Montana. The total assets of the company are $24,000,000. The total gross earnings for 1923 were $2,906,183, the largest in three years. Operating expenses of the system were reduced $92,841 during the year.

Several hundred miles of new rural telephone lines were built during the year, bringing the total long distance mileage to 35,552 miles. The province is now giving service to 67,279 subscribers. The rural telephone service has been an important factor in building up the province's farm population and making farm life attractive.

It is the assertion of the Alberta government that every farmer even in the remote corners of the province either has a telephone in his home or is within convenient reach of a telephone. The closely connected rural system which reaches many districts still in the pioneer state of development, has done much to rob farm life of its old bugbear of isolation and to make women happy and contented on the farm.

TODAY'S BRIGHT SPOT

Now Mr. Andrew Irick, an estimable gentleman of Bellefontaine, in Logan county, enters the competition against the nature—magicians of that famous old town of queer affairs, Winsted, Conn. It seems that a short time ago Mr. Irick came upon a lot of ring-necked pheasant eggs in his potato patch. Carefully lifting the eggs, he put them under a setting hen. A few days ago the eggs hatched Among the birds is one that is snow white. Whoever saw a white ring-necked pheasant? White crows and robins hail from Winsted, but the New England town has not yet announced a white ring-necked pheasant. Moreover, how late is it too late to change a bird in an egg?

COLUMBUS—Approximately 1,100,000 pounds of wool had been received at the producer's warehouse in Columbus for cooperative sale up to June 10, according to officials of the Ohio Sheep and Wool Growers' Association. This represents an increase of about 25 per cent as compared to the same period a year ago. A favorable year for cooperative wool selling is predicted by J. F. Walker, wool-marketing specialist of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation, who points to the export figures on wool From January 1 to May 25, 1923, wool imports amounted to 219,225,700 pounds while during the same period this year they totaled 79,266,100 pounds or only 36 per cent of last year's import. About 20,600,000 pounds have been exported to date this year, according to Mr. Walker, while the exports a year ago were almost negligible. This condition should lead to a strong domestic demand for American wools, says Mr. Walker.

ATHENS—Because the city treasury is heavily depleted through bonded debt, the city council is starting to cut and slash all thru the administration. The police force has been cut to two officers, the salary of the police chief reduced and the pay of the safety director reduced to $10 a month. Nobody could be more economical than that.

ELYRIA—Fred M. Bauer, F. E. Pierce, J. A. Ebert and A. R. Agate all of Elyria, went the $7,500 bond of Fred Irish, of Lorain, apprehended at Napa, Cal., where he had fled a year ago when a shortage of $1,100 was found in his books as county recorder.

OTTAWA—The Gilboa Methodist church, acting in conjunction with the Putnam county Sunday School Association, which just closed its annual convention in Youngsville, has arranged to send Andrew Ross, of Gilboa, as a delegate to the International Sunday School Convention, which will be held in Glasgow, Scotland, June 10 to 26.

LIMA—"And it rained 40 days and 40 nights" and when it was all over Noah landed on top of Mount Ararat with a menagerie for a cargo If it rains two more weeks, Lima's early settlers predicted the experience of Bible times may be repeated here. According to members of the DeLong family, who keep the hourly weather dope, it has rained for 21 out of the last 31 days.

WOODSFIELD—There's no rest for the weary, as our Aunt Fanny used to say in her quaint way. Rev. William Parsons held pastorates in New Jersey for 35 years. Then he came to Ohio to obtain charges where less strenuous activity was required, due to his advancing years. He also wanted outdoor work. He got the outdoor work. He became pastor of Presbyterian churches at Newcastle, Jerusalem and Beallsville. The Rev. J. J. Srodes retired as pastor of the local and Buchanan Presbyterian churches. Now the Jersey pastor has added those two to his circuit. He's working harder than ever a Jersey preacher worked.

WELLINGTON—Just what the symbolism of the newest burglars in Wellington is, nobody knows. They entered the home of Dr. F. M. Sponseller, took no valuables, but scattered plenty of flour and groceries over the floor of every room. The doctor awoke just in time to hear them slam the door as they left.

OTTAWA—Otis Hines, negro cook, formerly of Cincinnati, is being tried for the second time on the charge of murdering Robert Halloran, 19, Lima boxer, during the strike of the shop crafts in Lima in September, 1922. Hines is tried in Putnam county because of an order from the Supreme Court, to which body the case was appealed, which held that the change of venue should have been granted when asked for by attorneys before the original trial. Hines is at liberty on $10,000 bond, the largest ever demanded of any prisoner in Allen county.

COLUMBUS — Announcement has been made by F. E. Reynolds secretary of the Ohio State Teachers' Association, that Miss Ethel Price, of Piqua, will be unable to attend the convention of the National Education Association, to which she had been elected as delegate, and that O. E. Pore, of Ravenna, who headed the list of alternates will take her place. The convention will be held in Washington, June 29-July 4. Ohio is entitled to one more delegate than originally counted on, it is announced, and H. L. Sullivan, of Van Wert, will take the post. Ohio will have approximately 50 delegates, and there will be about 1000 Ohio teachers in attendance.

State Will Not Collect Damages from Contractor

COLUMBUS, June 18—No damages will be collected by the state from J. H. and W. R. Stringer, a contracting firm which started to build a road in Jefferson-co and failed to complete it, according to a supreme court decision made available today.

When the contracting firm stopped work on the road, the state completed the job and sought to recover the difference between the contract price and the cost under state supervision. The supreme court sustained a demurrer filed by the contractor and the indemnity company on his bond.

The contractor maintained he could not be held to the agreement because the law had not been complied with by the county commissioners in that an appropriation to pay the county's share of the cost of the work was not made.

Filled with the necessary chemicals, a filter has been invented in which hard water is softened for household use.

An inventor has patented a hair comb with a round mirror at one end.

A pretty June wedding of great interest to Coshocton people was solemnized Saturday morning, June 14 in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. McCann (Minnie Almack) in Hazleton, Pa., when Miss Mary Ruth Almack, daughter of Mrs. J. W. Almack, 214 south Sixth st, became the bride of Raymond Hamilton Carpenter, of Iola, Kansas.

The wedding day dawned clear and beautiful. Exactly at 10 o'clock, in the midst of a fairy land created by a wealth of bridal wreath, mountain laurel, honeysuckle and roses the ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Joseph H. Price pastor of St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal church.

The bride wore a gorgeous gown of crepe satin, trimmed with gold lace and carried a shower bouquet of Brides roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Charles Robert McCann, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor, while Mrs Herbert John Metzger (Dorothy Sewell) of Walto N Y., who has visited several times in the Almack home here, and who herself is a recent bride, attended the bride also Mrs. McCann, according to custom, wore her wedding gown of georgette and real lace. Mrs Metzger was charming in a frock of white georgette made with tight fitting bodice and bouffant skirt, adorned with quantities of Valenciennes lace.

Mrs. J. W. Almack, mother of the bride, wore a becoming dress of heavy brown crepe.

After an informal reception the guests went to Hotel Loughran, where the wedding breakfast was served. The dining room itself was a bower of beauty with huge bunches of white flowers placed in every nook. The long table was especially beautiful with its bridal wreath in vases and decorative sprays, and the delicate rose petal confetti scattered everywhere. The nut baskets were fashioned of double frilled crepe paper, with a miniature bride wearing a long flowing veil, while tiny white boxes, tied with white ribbon and decked with a sprig of bridal wreath, held the wedding cake. A soft light was thrown over all by the square white candles in crystal sticks, tied with white tulle

Immediately after the breakfast the bridal couple left for a several weeks honeymoon trip, motoring thru New York and the New England states.

The bride is a graduate of the local high school and received the degrees of A. B. and M. A. at Ohio State University, Columbus, and Ph D. from Bryn Mawr College. At Ohio State she was a member of Delta Gamma sorority, Mortar Board Honorary sorority, Browning and the Strollers. Convention ly wreathed in smiles, was flushed with anger. He had called the convention and held control until the Communists took it and was fighting now with his back to the wall too keep the Communists from completely dominating the convention and going ahead with their program that called for immediate formation of a third party with an independent ticket that would exclude Senator Robert M. Lafollette, Republican of Wisconsin.

"Boys, they double crossed me."

This final shot by Mahoney at the radicals was all but a formal admission of surrender.

"But we—and he meant the Farmer-Laborites—haven't lost all hope," Mahoney told International News Service. "We are prepared to make one last fight on the floor to beat the Communists. If we fail, well, the convention is over, we will walk out, clear the hall and lock the doors."

Upon that program the Farmer-Laborites were united.

In fact the delegates would have faced barred doors today had not Mahoney demanded one more showdown with the Communists. The St. Paul Association of Business Men, which has charge of the convention hall, went to Mahoney and requested that the keys be turned back and the doors locked because of the convention's action in seating the radicals.

Mahoney assured the hall managers that, if the Farmer-Laborites walked out, the Communists, if they did not leave, would be driven out of the hall by force, if necessary. Arrangements were made for posting special details of police about the hall.

Mahoney admitted that he, himself, would have to assume the blame should the Communists succeed.

"We should not have allowed them to get into the convention as members of the Communist party in the first place. But they pretended they would come into the convention and follow the program we outlined. We gave them ten delegates. They packed the hall with Communist delegates who traveled under false guise They practiced cunning and trickery in trying to steal the convention from us."

An indignation meeting that lasted into the early hours was held by the Farmer-Laborites in Labor Temple Mahoney pleaded for the united support against the radicals.

Down the street, in a hotel dining room, the Communists, happy and jovial, laughed and shouted while they staged a free banquet to which all delegates were invited. The room was packed. It was there the Communists put in the final licks with which they planned to break the back of the convention. The fight to wreck the convention or give it new life was scheduled to come early today. It was over the question of whether a third party should be formed at once, or later, and the appointment of an executive committee of two members from each state to endorse LaFollette for the presidency. The Communists wanted to form the party. The Farmer-Laborites demanded selection of the committee.

Should the Communists win, they announced that after going thru the useless procedure of asking LaFollette to head a third party with their platform, they would nominate an Independent ticket with Duncan McDonald, of Illinois, as the probable presidential nominee and William Bouch, of Washington state as probable running mate.

CONVENTION HALL, St Paul, Minn, June 18—Secretary of the treasury Andrew Mellon, was denounced today as the "arch bootlegger of the age," by State Senator Charles E. Taylor, of Montana, permanent chairman of the Farmer-Labor - Progressive convention meeting here.

DORIS MEETS AN INTERESTING FAMILY IN FEATHERS.

"WELL," laughed Doris softly as she watched the pretty bird running over the ground, "I'd say you were a meadow-lark, if your vest had more yellow in it."

"I'll agree with you that I'm not a meadow-lark," chirped the brown bird, merrily. "You never saw a meadow-lark wearing a suit like mine—brown, barred with black with a chocolate and black vest. Another thing—you can always tell a flicker by the white patch on his lower back, just above his tail, like the patch on my back. I'm Daddy Flicker, a cousin to Willy Woodpecker."

"Really?" laughed Doris. "I know him and his family very well. But your cousin never feeds on the ground."

"No, his bill is formed for picking bugs and insects from wood," chirped Daddy Flicker. "Mine is not. I have a long, sticky tongue. I just ram it down in an ant-hill and can catch as many as a thousand ants at a time."

"Well, of all things," cried Doris. "I never heard of such a thing before. What do you do about feeding your family? Or haven't you any family?"

"Yes, indeed. I have a family," replied Daddy Flicker, "and I'm on my way home now." And he spread his wings and invited Doris to ride with him.

Strange to say, by some magic, Doris, when she looked around, found that she was so small that she could scarcely climb upon Daddy Flicker's back. She had to climb upon a stone first, then onto his brown back.

"Indeed, I Have a Family."

Away they sailed through the air, Doris holding on to the feathers on Daddy Flicker's back. Right across his neck, Daddy Flicker had a beautiful red crescent, and Doris caught hold of these red feathers.

"This house," Daddy Flicker explained as they stopped at a large hole in the top of an apple tree, "used to belong to a cousin of ours. He left it and we moved in. You see, we flickers are not good carpenters like the woodpeckers. We can't build a house nicely, so we move in a house deserted by our cousins."

Mrs. Flicker, hearing them talking, stuck her head out of the doorway and nodded. All the difference that Doris could see in her appearance was that while Daddy Flicker had lovely black patches on his cheek, Mama Flicker hadn't.

"Yes, indeed; of course you may see our family," she chirped proudly, and she moved over so that Doris could look at the comfy little nest filled with gaping yellow mouths.

"Daddy has some food for you," laughed Daddy Flicker, and pumped partly-digested food from his own crop into the hungry mouths of his babies, much to Doris's amusement.

"You see what a hard time I'd have, carrying wiggling insects to this hungry bunch," Daddy Flicker laughed when he had fed the last youngster. "But I guess if I liked worms and bugs like my cousins, I would at least try. Give me a good meal of acorns and I'm happy."

Just then Doris heard her mama calling her, so she bade her friends good-by.

Daddy Flicker carried her to the ground. The second her feet touched the grass she was changed back to her real size.

When she told her mama where she had been, her mama laughed. She thought Doris had been dreaming. But Doris knew better.

What the Men on the Truck Forced Madge to Do.

WITH the automatic reaction which every motorist has to a blowout, I swerved the car to the side of the road and prepared to stop the engine. Then, as a second thought came to me, I sent the car back again into the road, discarding the impulse to get out and attempt, with Mamie's help, to change the tire for the spare fastened at the rear of my car.

In the first place, the aid of the girl beside me was something I could not enlist. If she were dangerous—as Katherine had feared and I had believed just after the huge truck had passed—then I could not trust her to help me and I would not dare to relax my own watchfulness over her.

On the other hand, if Katherine and I were but the victims of inflamed imaginations, I could not bring myself to the absurdity of prosaically changing a tire with her aid, after my melodramatic threat to use my little silencer revolver if she should move from the posture in which I had directed her to sit.

There was but one thing to be done under these circumstances, and that was to go on, trusting to luck that I might meet or pass some one who would give me a hand. So I sent the car along in the wobbly careening fashion, which only a collapsed tire can effect, while I scanned the road before me, hoping against hope that I might see someone to whom I could appeal for aid.

A Jovial Greeting.

Of course, I did not dare go nearly so fast as I had done, and as I realized that darkness was fast coming, I had hard work to keep my body rigid and my hands firmly upon the wheel. Then from the rear sounded the ear-splitting screech which only a truck siren can give. Wondering whether I would dare signal for aid, I hugged the side of the road while a huge truck went lumbering by.

As I caught a glimpse of the men upon it, my heart descended to my heels and stopped there only because it could get no farther.

For the truck was the same one we had met but a little while before, and it had no sooner passed than with a quick warning gesture of the driver's hand he slowed down and then deftly swinging the huge machine half across the road so that to pass it was almost an impossible thing for me, he put on his brakes, though leaving the engine running, and with his companions jumped to the ground and came running back to our car.

I bit my lower lip in the effort to keep from screaming or fainting. Then as the men's voices sounded in jovial, friendly greeting, I wondered if I were the victim again of my own imagination.

"Hello, Mamie!" one of them called, the one to whom Mamie had waved, and the man at his side supplemented his hail by accosting me. "Look Out! She's Got a Gun!"

"What's the matter, Sister? Got a blowout? Don't you want some help?"

I was about to stammer out my thanks when Mamie squirmed like an eel out of the seat by my side and running to the man who had spoken to her began to talk to him rapidly and angrily, accompanying her words by gestures toward me which left me in no doubt as to the unfriendly nature of the tale she was telling him.

The other men cut short their advance toward the car and clustered around her. But I noticed that not for one instant was I outside the espionage of at least one pair of eyes.

Mamie's voice ceased, indeed it was cut short by a rough:

"Cheese it, now! You've spilled all we need to know," from one of the men, and then there was a brief muttered colloquy among the men before they turned to me.

"I'll trouble you to step out of that there car, Ma'am, and be quick about it," one of them growled, and from somewhere I gathered the courage to retort spiritedly:

"Indeed, I shall do no such thing. You have no right to interfere with me, and I shall report both you and this girl to the nearest police."

They answered me with a loud guffaw, and one of them ejaculated:

"Police! My left eye! That's good! She talks as if she had 'em sewed up in her pocket."

The laughter lasted, however, but an instant, and two of the men started to open the door of the car.

"Of course, if you'd rather we'd drag you out," one of them said indifferently, "we can accommodate you. It sure don't make no difference to us, whether you land on the ground standing nice or in a heap."

I yielded to the inevitable promptly.

"I'll get out quietly," I said, and with one hand unostentatiously resting upon my concealed silencer revolver, I stepped out of the car and before they could stop me, slid around it so that its body momentarily was between me and the men.

"Look out!" Mamie screeched. "She's got a gun in her pocket!"

WHERE MEN WEAR SPECIAL HATS TO CHURCH.

ARICA, which is located in the province of San Pedro de Tacna, is one of the largest seaports in Chile. It is rich in gold, silver and copper mines and has one of the few nitrate of soda deposits in the world.

When the tourist first visits Arica he is usually surprised to find in this city all the atmosphere of the Old World. Having been told about the numerous earthquakes which at various times have almost completely destroyed Arica, he naturally expects to see a truly modern city of South America. But, in spite of the fact that Arica has been rebuilt again and again, it has retained much of the spirit of Spain.

People in Arica don't pay the high prices for Panama hats that we do. Every one—men and women, rich and poor — wears a "Jipi-japas," which is the South American name for a Panama. They have been named after the village in Ecuador where these hats are said to have been first woven.

In Tacna, a town near-by, there is a beautiful cathedral — most Chileans are Roman Catholic—supposedly designed by Alexandre Gustave Eiffel, who designed the famous Eiffel Tower, in Paris. And to worship in this magnificent temple, no native of Arica or Tacna would wear so common a hat as a Panama. Men wear special hats to go to church and the women wear mantillas of black net.

MORNING, NOON, NIGHT

ONE girl is like the morning, with coloring as delicate as the dawn. She's very young and has just begun to "see" and "understand." To her the world is as rosy as the sky when the sun begins to creep o'er the hills. Another girl is bright, vivacious, gay and sparkling with all the radiance of the sun at high noon! She has determined to "live" and get out of life all there is to be had! She's happy as a lark and spreads sunshine everywhere. The other girl is still and deep as the night—intriguing and full of mystery. Different? Perhaps—but some men say they're all "sisters under the skin."

CLARA MORRIS WRITES ABOUT Style---The Gift

Clara Morris

THE popular head of the department was engaged, but had whispered: "I'll be free in a few minutes."

As accident had destroyed Camille's opera cloak—that was what evening wraps were called in those days—I had to replace it quickly for that very night's wearing, and greatly desired the aid of this particular saleswoman. Waiting, I was presently startled by an angry, tear-thickened voice saying:

"There it's gone to that pudgy old woman—the newest, most original of the fashion of tomorrow. An artists' dream gown! And with Mrs. X. in it, it will not have one trace of style. She will kill it!"

"I don't know how you make that out!" snapped the helper, bringing out cloaks for inspection. "A dress of highest fashion can't help being stylish—the dressmaker sees to that."

"And do you agree to this, little lady?" came in a kindly voice from behind us, and the merchant prince, proprietor, with a twinkle in his blue old eyes, shook hands pleasantly, but pressed the question and rather uneasily I made answer:

"No, sir. Sometimes a woman will put herself into the most fashionable gown Paris has sent you, and she will extinguish every lure, grace and novelty, retaining only the dollar mark of costly effort."

"And whose the fault?" sharply demanded the merchant.

A Battle of Wits

"The woman's, of course. Style is the soul of a fashion. The wearer of the gown must contribute her share in effecting a beautiful result. The poor couturiere can't provide work, fashion, air and carriage, too," I answered, and seeing him about to speak, and guessing his question, I rushed him, saying, "Sir, you are far wiser than we are. I wish you would define that word 'style'."

He saw the trick and laughed like a boy.

"Eh?" he cried. "You are canny as a Scot shifting responsibility to another, but it's such a little word 'style' and simple as——"

"Oh!" I interrupted. "If you leap at it like that, I'll add two more little words for you to define—'charm' and 'chic'."

He waved me away, saying:

"Little nuts, but hard of shell. You must give me time. Remember, I come from a sleepy town and I never start on number two until I'm quite sure of number one. Now, what difference can you find between 'fashion' and 'style'—without jesting, can you find any?"

I looked at the three saleswomen who grinned broadly back as I answered:

"Fashion, sir, is general. Style is individual."

He smiled rather mockingly. The girl who eternally brought forth and put back garments, handed me an exquisite wrap.

"This is fashion?" I asked.

"The acme" was the answer. I put it suddenly across the shoulders of the girl and asked her to walk a short distance for me. The old gentleman groaned behind us. Some one said:

"Pearls before——"

I took the cloak again and turning flung it about the woman whose aid I wished. She drew the lovely folds about her, her shoulders drew back, her chin raised, her eyes drooped—she swayed slowly down the aisle—beautiful to behold! With a showman's gesture, I announced:

"Style, sir! The acme!"

There was laughter, quickly subdued, until the employer with mock despair cried:

"Beaten in my own bailiwick! Well, I admit that 'fashion' and 'style' are two words, absolutely divisible."

Why Not This Law

Still, I kept thinking, we should have an artistic sumptuary law forbidding the sale of an exquisite garment to an inherently bad dresser.

The perfect wearing of clothes is a gift of Nature, just as the eye for color, the ear for time and perfect pitch are gifts.

Three Big Points of Beauty Culture

By LUCREZIA BORI

The Famous Spanish Prima Donna

IT has always seemed to me that the term "beauty secrets" is overdone. It is inappropriate because it implies that the preservation of beauty is managed by some secret process, known only to the initiated.

Well, we may call those who understand true beauty processes the initiated if we choose. But the term, to my way of thinking, may be translated to mean simply those who use common sense.

As I have said so many times, beauty and health are inseparable. Show me the woman who glows with the vitality of perfect health, whose hair and eyes shine and whose face gleams with pleasure and enthusiasm and contentment, and I will show you the woman whom I consider beautiful. Her figure may not be perfect, but her complexion is very apt to measure up to true beauty standards. And where the face reflects a sensible mode of living we are most likely to find true beauty.

First of all, there's the body to be cared for. Cleanliness and exercise and common-sense eating I consider the prime requisites. The daily bath, the daily exercise and the eating of three well-balanced meals are the important points.

The bath you can take morning or night, according to your own convenience and preference. These, too, must help you decide whether the bath shall be warm, or warm followed by a cold rinse.

Do not neglect your exercise. It may be in the form of indoor calisthenics, it may be some vigorous outdoor exercise, or you may take it in the form of brisk walking—but see that you get it every day.

Eat good nourishing food, and enough of it. Then you will not be tempted to eat indigestible things between meals. An apple morning or night, or both, is very good. If you need building up, milk taken between meals is excellent. Drink plenty of water, and you will doubtless find it best to form the habit of drinking at stated intervals between meals. Two glasses of water in the morning, two between meals and two more at night should keep you in good condition.

Now, as to your mind, you must remember that the resourceful person is never dissatisfied. Have your enthusiasms and interests, and you will never find yourself with time on your hands and the feeling that you do not know what to do with it. Keep interested every minute, and the expression of your face will reflect the satisfaction you find in living.

THE HOME KITCHEN

The Authority on Home Cooking

Coax the Coy Summer Appetite with Canapes.

EARLY Summer dinners must be made tempting if the appetite is to be stimulated. Tired of Winter food, and not quite ready for the cold foods that make a hot-weather menu enticing, the flagging appetite requires distinct change in the regular order of things.

With this end in view, suppose we eliminate soup for a time and use either a cocktail of harmless ingredients or one of the many attractive canapes that are quickly and simply made.

Canapes are usually served on toasted or plain bread rounds, but this may be varied by cutting slices of a baker's loaf an inch and a half thick, trimming off crusts, then hollowing out the centers, brushing them over with melted butter and setting them in the oven long enough to color and toast delicately. The cases may be filled then with any canape mixture and they look most attractive and alluring.

Fruit cocktails are made of seasonable fruits, mixed, slightly sweetened and dressed with a little lemon or orange juice. Occasionally, a bit of thin, spiced syrup is added. Fish, crabmeat, lobster or shrimp cocktails are made by flaking or breaking up the meat and allowing it to marinate for a few minutes in a French dressing. It is then drained and the meat is lightened by a few chopped celery leaves, a seeded and finely-diced cucumber, shredded lettuce or minced peppers. Watercress, chives and a little grated onion are frequently used.

Pineapple Fish Canape.

Flake fine, enough cold-boiled cod-fish or other white fish to make one cupful. Add to the fish, three-quarters of a cupful of minced, fresh pineapple or a half cupful of the grated pineapple, well drained. Add pepper, salt and enough light mayonnaise to bind the mixture. Spread it lightly on toast rounds or put it into the toast cases and garnish it with a sprig of fresh cress or parsley and stuffed olives.

Sardine and Grapefruit Canape.

Free one medium-sized grapefruit from all seeds and white skin, then break the pulp into convenient-sized pieces. Pour over it, three tablespoonfuls of light French dressing and let it marinate for twenty minutes. Meantime, drain a large can of sardines from oil, remove the skin and bones, then break them into paste with a silver fork, moisten them with a little of the marinade, and spread them on the toast rounds. Drain the grapefruit and top each with a little, dusting it with paprika. Garnish each canape with a spray of watercress. This amount makes eight canapes. The drained marinade may be set aside to dress a plain lettuce salad. Don't waste it, as it is rich and flavorful.

Cucumber Canapes.

Slice thinly, two fresh cucumbers and sprinkle them with a heavy French dressing to which the juice of an onion has been added. Let the cucumbers marinate for fifteen minutes, drain them, arrange them on toast slices, cut in squares, garnish them with olive rings and place one rolled anchovy in the centre of each slice of toast.

Russian Canape.

Arrange on toast, a half cupful of caviar, a tablespoonful each of chopped onion and hard-boiled egg and a little highly-seasoned French dressing. Garnish each canape with small gherkins.

ADVICE TO GIRLS

By ANNIE LAURIE

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a young man, twenty-three years of age. I am very much in love with a girl three years my junior. She says she loves me, but she was formerly engaged to a friend of mine and they seemed to have some misunderstanding. I do not wish to injure my friend, as I think that he still loves her. Should I give her up?

UNDECIDED.

UNDECIDED: Since the engagement has been broken, your friend no longer counts in the race. If the girl had not confessed her love, I would suggest that you go to him, tell him of your love and ask him whether you would be intruding if you tried to win her. But under the circumstances, there seems no reason why you should not court her, win her and be very happy. Good luck!

YOUR HEALTH

How to Keep Well During the Warm Weather

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,

United States Senator from New York,

Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

DR. COPELAND

IN the Springtime and in the Summer there are physical temptations which do not trouble us in Winter. We are tempted to play endless sets of tennis, to walk long distances, to stay up late enjoying the balmy air. We eat quantities of ice cream and drink gallons of cold beverages.

We get very sweaty, throw off our outer garments and seek a shady spot to cool off, too rapidly probably.

We forget that too-long exposure to the sun, without protection of the head, may have its bad effects on the brain and nervous system. You may point to the farmer's long days in the fields, but you watch him! He wears a straw hat and on very hot days fills the crown of the hat with green leaves or a moist handkerchief.

At this season you do not require a hearty mid-day meal. It isn't good for you to eat much, certainly you shouldn't if your work is light or purely mental.

Some housekeepers attempt to cool the house by closing the doors and windows. This is all right in the daytime, but don't do it in the sleeping rooms at night. You want all the fresh air you can get. Brush aside all fear of "night air." The theory that night air is harmful was exploded long ago.

Wear sensible clothes in the Summer. Things that will wash are good for men, women and children. There is nothing like the feeling of freshness which is associated with the putting on of clean clothes.

Frequent baths are demanded at all seasons, but in the Summer they are indispensable to health. The hair and the feet require unusual care in hot weather, not only for personal comfort, but for the comfort of the family and friends.

Change the shoes and stockings on coming in from the day's work. It is surprising how refreshing it is to bathe and dry the feet and to clothe them in dry apparel.

If you have no near-by swimming pool, see if you can't make one. A few hours' work will deepen a hole in the creek. It is worth all the trouble to have a place where the sweat and grime of the day may be removed.

If you can do it, take a full hour for your "nooning," spending it in some shady spot. Treat yourself as well as you would treat a team of horses or your dog. You wouldn't think of running your team or even a dog up and down the road in the blistering sun at mid-day. To spend the whole of your noon hour playing tennis, baseball or some other equally violent game in the sun is quite as foolish.

Particularly in the beginning of Summer, break in gradually to unaccustomed exercise and exposure. As the season progresses you will harden and be able to do as you please.

Answers to Health Questions

J. T. Q.—What would you advise for a tooth which has grown out of place, but which is sound?

2.—What can I do to rid my face of blackheads and pimples?

A.—If it does not bother you I should suggest leaving it alone. If it damages your beauty you could see an orthodontist—a dentist specializing in regulation of the teeth.

2.—For full particulars on this subject kindly send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

G. A. M. Q.—What can I do to relieve burning feet? My feet burn continuously. Would fallen arches cause this condition?

A.—Fallen arches might cause the condition you mention. Wear arch supporters and if they do not relieve you consult an orthopedist for an examination and treatment.

J. A. Q.—Which is the more healthful to a person with a weak stomach, whole-wheat bread or biscuits? Should any warm bread be eaten?

A.—Whole-wheat bread is the more healthful. Warm bread should not be eaten.

The little powder-blue crepe dress shown above is typical. The tucks about the waistline are very narrow, and they gradually grow wider till they reach the hem. Tucks mark the short sleeves, and a sheer collar of white organdie finishes the neckline.

HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

THURSDAY, JUNE 19.

Although the augury for this day indicates much activity and enterprise, yet there may be obstacles and delays. With the force of Mars by solar as well as lunar direction in most active operation, inciting to all manner of aggressive and adventurous moves, yet the stubborn force of Saturn may prove a millstone, blocking the pathway of progress. It may prove wise to refrain from large investments or speculations and to be on guard against trusting untried acquaintances. Change also should be avoided.

Those whose birthday it is are under a sway inciting to unusual activity and enterprise, yet these may be attended by some hazard. Also, there may be obstacles and delays of a stubborn nature. Speculation should be avoided and friends should be chosen judiciously. A child born on this day will be enterprising, courageous and ambitious, but may have many obstacles in life to overcome unless it is thoroughly trained.

PENNY ANTE — A TRAVELING SALESMAN IN THE CROWD — By JEAN KNOTT

General Tires Coming Thursday; Rasnick Is Slated to Take Mound

Jim Vaughn and his General Tires, of Akron will invade Coshocton Thursday evening to cross bats with the Coshocton Regulars at Lake Park. The game starts at 5:30 p. m.

Manager Bill Robertson said today his chioce to face Jim Vaughn and his swatters will likely be Rasnick. Rasnick won a 2 to 1 decision over Jim and his Tires last season here.

Thursday will mark the first appearance of Akron at Lake Park this season. Two weeks ago Coshocton was defeated in a close game by the Tires on the latter's diamond with Vaughn twirling for the home team. The score was 3 to 1.

From reports Akron will likely bring some rooters along. A big crowd of local fans will likely attend the game as Akron was a big drawing card last season, especially with Vaughn pitching. Vaughn has the reputation of being one of the best semi-pro twirlers in northern Ohio.

Rasnick hails from the same town as Vaughn and they are bitter rivals. Robertson said his choice is not definite and he may switch to Kelly. Kelly was a former teammate of Vaughn's.

Geo. Bope will be back for the game and will hold down the initial sack. Bope played a good game Sunday and also clouted the apple over right fence for a homer.

From all reports the Tires have about the same line-up as last season. They have a fast club and have ben winning a number of games up there.

The Regulars have forgotten the defeat handed them by the Greys last Sunday and are ready to get revenge on Akron. No doubt this will be one of the hardest fought exhibitions the local fans will get to see here this season.

On Sunday Coshocton and Cambridge will play the second and final game of the first half-season together here. Cambridge beat the Regulars at Cambridge several weeks ago and the Robertsons havn't forgotten it yet. Manager Robertson feels confident that it will be a different story Sunday.

The Afefas have a much stronger line-up this season than last since Johnny Scott is bossing the club. The Afefas are not far behind the Regulars in the standing.

A record crown is expected to see each game. Sunday's game will start at 2:30 p. m.

Harvard and Yale Rowers Meet Friday

NEW LONDON, Conn., June 18—Both Yale and Harvard's adherents are jubilant today over the showing made by the crews "tuning up" in the trials for the annual race next Friday.

The varsity eight spun over the four-mile course last night in a test while Coach Leader said it was merely a paddle, and not a test of speed. While the time was said to have been faster than in preceding trials, the official time was kept secret.

Harvard's four crews also practiced short stretches and starts.

BELGIAN WINS BALLOON RACE

BRUSSELS, June 18. — Lieut. Ernest De Muyter, pilot of the Belgian balloon Belgica, was believed this afternoon to have won the James Gordon Bennett cup for the third successive time.

A telegram was received from Lieut. De Muyter, saying he had landed safely near Edinburgh, Scotland. While official distances have not been compiled, it is understood that De Muyter has more miles to his credit than any other of the 16 pilots in the international contest.

All of the 17 balloons that left here Sunday afternoon have now been accounted for without a single accident. The Belgica was the last to report.

If Belgium is officially credited with victory this year, the trophy will permanently remain in the possession of that country as it will have captured it three times in succession.

According to unofficial figures the nearest competitor of the Belgian aeronaut was the Frenchman LaPorte in the balloon Vile de Bordeaux which landed near Brighton, on the southern coast of England.

ON BOARD THE STEAMSHIP AMERICA WITH THE AMERICAN OLYMPIC TEAM, June 18—A calm sea and balmy weather gave the American athletes, bound for Paris, an excellent chance for another workout today and most of them took advantage of it.

The coaches warned the athletes that they are still candidates for the United States team and must be perfectly fit when they reach Paris. The men must retire at 10:45 and get up at 7:30.

Wayne Johnson, Verne Booth, J. E. Lermond and Michael Devaney, all distance runners, are keeping their muscles supple by deck jogs.

Loren Murchison is not doing much work. He is underweight and wants to fatten up a bit. Joie Ray, Charlie Paddock and other sprinters are taking things easy.

Two ambitious athletes, who stowed away, were found and set at work today. Layton, a hurdler, will be given a chance as an alternate, F. N. Nowka, an old time walker, was given a place with the crew.

The athletes are entirely pleased by the arrangements on shipboard and the morale of the men is excellent. Food accomodations are fine. Large tanks of sterlized water are being carried for drinking purposes.

"I intend to watch the matches in which Miss Wills plays today and tomorrow in order, especially, to study Miss Wills' style of play," Miss Lenglen said this morning. "I am anxious to get acquainted with her. I anticipate a great game if we meet in the Wimbldon tourney."

Paul Carpenter, hurler for the Cambridge Afefas has been given his release from that club. Owing to weather conditions "Carp" hasn't been in shape practically all season, is the report.

According to advices from Columbus Wednesday, "Lefty" Kime, who pitched a few games for Zanesville, expects to join the New York Yankees today. Kime has won all of his games this season. A brother of Shortstop Scott of the Yanks is playing with Bryan and he tipped off Manager Huggins to sign Kime.

The Yankees increased their lead over the Red Sox to two full games when they defeated the Indians, 7 to 5, while Boston lost to the Tigers, 7 to 4, and dropped into third place. The Yankees' advantage over the Tigers is one full game. The Giants, Cubs and Dodgers lost no ground yesterday, the Giants defeating the Cardinals 5 to 3, the Cubs walloping the Phillies, 6 to 5, and the Dodgers trimming the Reds, 5 to 4. The Giants' lead is a game and a half in front of the Cubs who are two games in front of the of the Dodgers. Babe Ruth knocked out his sixteenth homer.

The Braves and Pirates evened up matters, the pirates winning the first with a ninth inning rally 5 to 2, but losing the twilight game 1 to 0.

Chicago pitchers couldn't stop the Washington batters, and the White Sox lost to the Senators, 12 to 6.

Such popularity must be deserved

WHETHER it's tennis or cigarettes or anything else, popularity is no stroke of luck. No champion ever held his laurels except by making good. No cigarette ever held popular favor except by deserving it.

The popularity of Chesterfields is an outstanding example. For months now they have been drawing over 1000 smokers a day away from other cigarettes.

Surely this is proof of their quality and good taste.

Wisconsin Crew Shows Up Well

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 18—While Washington won the honors in the three mile varsity race at the 37th annual Poughkeepsie regatta for the second successive year, the remarkable showing of Wisconsin was the talk of the east in rowing circles today.

Finishing second and only two lengths behind the winners, makes it virtually certain that the Wisconsin crew will return for next year race, it was declared here today. Previous to the race much doubt was expressed whether Wisconsin would row in the 1925 race.

MENACE OF ACCIDENTS

WHAT will it profit the human race if the scientists reduce the death record from diseases to a minimum, if what Dr. Beard of the University of Illinois calls an epidemic of injuries takes the place of the old-time epidemics of infection, now being conquered?

Injuries and fatalities from the modern craze for speed and the mechanical age are on the increase. Fifteen thousand persons were killed and 1,700,000 hurt by autos in the United States in 1923. Twenty-three thousand deaths and 3,000,000 injuries, 115,000 of which caused permanent disability, make a sad record for accidents in mechanical industries for the same year. According to Dr. Beard about as many people were killed in automobiles at railroad crossings last year as died of scarlet fever in 1920. The automobile takes as high a toll in fatalities as diphtheria and scarlet fever combined. And the suicide death rate is as high as that of whooping cough. Aviation continues to claim its victims, although, compared with other occupations, the number of fatalities is small.

Publicity, through the press, safety education in the schools and by radio, the use of all practical safety appliances, and greater care on the part of everyone, are the only remedies. As these are brought into effect, we may hope to see the accident epidemic conquered. At present the epidemic is becoming more menacing year by year. War itself could hardly produce more victims. It will take the serious efforts of all the people to make life reasonably safe.

TWO INCIDENTS AT ALTON

NEARLY 87 years ago at Alton, Ill., a shot was fired which, to borrow an Emersonian exaggeration that is justified by poetic license, was "heard round the world." The shot killed the Rev. Elijah P. Lovejoy, an abolitionist, who was defending his newspaper plant against a mob made up of men who upheld the institution of negro slavery. In one way of speaking, that was the first gun fired in the American Civil War.

Ever since the autumn of 1837 the lovers of human liberty have made of Alton a mental mecca, if not indeed a place of actual pilgrimage, because it was there that one of the earliest martyrs to the cause of justice to the negro in America shed his lifeblood. The towering monument to Lovejoy is the little city's chief claim to the exceptional respect of those who dwell elsewhere.

On the ninth day of June, just past, the Alton High School students enjoyed a steamboat excursion on the Mississippi River, the stream into which Lovejoy's type and press were thrown by the mob. Commencement was over, and the valedictorian of the class of 1924, the high-honor man, who also had won a scholarship in the University of Illinois, boarded the craft with his classmates. He, however, failed to enjoy the excursion. In fact, he did not participate, being ordered off the boat. He walked down the gangplank and back uptown, where he took a look at the Lovejoy monument and did some thinking.

His name is Alexander Whitfield. He is a negro—which is why he was ordered off the boat.

A MASSACRE SANCTIONED

AMRITSAR is a word that has become a symbol of shame for the British Empire. On June 13,1919, Brigadier General Dyer entered an inclosure at Amritsar where 10,000 Hindus were meeting despite his prohibition of assemblies. Without giving any warning or notice to disperse he ordered his troops to fire on the unarmed crowd which was peacefully listening to an address. He continued the fire for ten minutes; his men fired 1,650 rounds, "the fire being directed on crowds, not on individuals, and redirected from time to time where the crowds were thickest." On the conclusion of the firing he and his troops retired, leaving the wounded unattended, and three hundred and seventy-nine persons dead. Sir Michael O'Dwyer, Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab, officially approved General Dyer's action. After an interval and a protracted inquiry, the Indian Government removed General Dyer from his command in India, and General O'Dwyer was censured. At home, however, a group of irrepressible Tories made Dyer and O'Dwyers heroes. The Morning Post raised £26,300 for Dyer. Nor are Dyer and O'Dwyer ashamed of their butchery today. General O'Dwyer had the impudence to bring a libel suit against Sir Sankaran Nair for statements about Amritsar made in his book, "Gandhi and Anarchy." A British judge, after hearing testimony, dared express his view that General Dyer "acted rightly," and was "wrongly punished"; and a British jury awarded General O'Dwyer a verdict of £500 and costs—more than £15,000. Such a blessing upon the massacre at Amritsar makes the word more than ever a kind of stench in the world's nostrils. When will Anglo-Saxons learn that they have no divine right to murder other races?

The Fakirs bal lended this year in a riotous outburst that brought police reserves. Not even the old East Side dances where each guest brought his own sawdust and recesses were called at intervals to mop up the blood touched it. It was the most disorderly crew of rowdies the town ever beheld. The offenders were mostly young college boys steeped in drug store gin. they went through the hotel where the ball was held breaking in on sleeping guests, destroying furniture and cutting up bed linen. The Fakirs is a ball given by artists. The guests come lavishly costumed. Very bizarre costuming is aimed at and of course that attracts the sight seers. After the ball was over 31 overcoats were found in hallways, 16 silk hats smashed beyond repair and more than two dozen had to seek medical repair for bruised eyes and cracked heads.

Name of a dog! Gaston is in again. Each year Gaston comes to New York from his dear Paree—oo, la la! He stops at the smartest hotel and wears high heeled red topped shoes, a green straw hat with a plume in the side and ribbon bow knots in his cuffs. Gaston is one of the most successful salesmen for a perfume house. His New York dinners are about the smartest in town. He is to Broadway what the old time wine agent used to be save he is a little more lavish. He makes most of the present crop of spenders seem miserable tight wads.

They have been trying to elect a Mayor of Broadway. Of course it is an unofficial job, but it will in a measure designate who is the most popular person along the Dazzling Gulch. So far Walter Kingsley, who is the Keith press agent, is leading all contenders.

IN THE RIGHT

How stately is the office holder who sternly says, "Kerchoo! I always am prepared to shoulder the blame for what I do. The right is always what I'm after, and it's a lead pipe cinch that neither threats nor scornful laughter can move me half an inch. You say if I support this measure, which I take a pleasure in bidding me good night. If I oppose this other measure, which I consider wrong, I'll lose the job you think I treasure, and join the lame duck throng. Ah, well gee whiz and donner wetter. I am a stubborn wight, and how can any gent die better than for eternal right? I do not fear your red hot phrases, the grisly threats you fling; good day, you all may go to blazes. I'll do the honest thing." How stately is the office holder whose conscience is his guide, whose eyes grow colder still and colder when tawdry tricks are tried. He does what's right while pikers wonder and say with gasping sob: We'll surely shoot him all to thunder when next he seeks a job. But when the righteous guy goes running for office once again the voters to his aid come running in flocks of five and ten.

DAILY NEWS LETTER

General News and Gossip from Staff Writers At Home and Abroad

BY CARL L. TURNER

COLUMBUS, June 18—Hundreds of Americans, though they may not be aware of it, have lost their appetites for wheat.

Hundreds of others are eating much less wheat and products of this cereal than they did before the World War.

And thus do rural economists at Ohio State University here account, in part, for the huge wheat surplus which is taxing the capacity of the country's granaries and the patience of no small number of farmers in the great wheat belt.

Figures compiled by the Government disclose that, during the three years from 1920 to 1922, each person in the United States consumed an average of 4.22 bushels of wheat annually. But in pre-war times, from 1909 to 1913, each person consumed an average of 5.06 bushels a year.

Thus is follows that, thru the changing American appetite, approximately 90,000,000 bushels of wheat less than were consumed before the great conflict meet the present demand. The current surplus is said to be in the neighborhood of 200,000,000 bushels.

This stupendous decrease in wheat consumption, generally overlooked, had much to do with creating the surplus, Ohio State economists believe.

"If our pre-war appetite for wheat products should return," C. R. Arnold, an Ohio State economist, points out, "we would consume annually about 90,000,000 bushels of wheat more than we do now. That would reduce materially the 200,000,000 bushel surplus over domestic consumption."

The university economists do not attempt to definitely place the responsibility for the great wheat surplus, altho they admit the introduction of wheat substitutes and "wheatless days" during the war probably had much to do with the decline in the use of the cereal after the war.

With dairy products, however, the reverse has been true. According to the university economists, the per capita consumption of dairy products during 1919 averaged the equivalent of 831 pounds of whole milk. In 1920, they say, it rose to 841 pounds, in 1921 to 923 pounds and in 1922 to 950 pounds.

Hence, while the average American was turning away from wheat he was increasing the demand for dairy products more than 14 per cent during the last four years.

Fond mothers may be averse to comparing the physical peculiarities of their babies with those of a baby chick, but children's specialists and chick specialists, nevertheless, seem to be taking leaves from each other's books.

A prominent New York physician is reported to have recommended feeding egg yolks to babies with a view to strengthening their bones. For the same reason, though, they call it "leg weakness," Ohio State University poultry specialists have been feeding egg yolks to baby chicks at the university farm.

The physician is said to have prescribed half a yolk a day, mixed in the milk supply of infants not yet two months old. From that age on the recommendation was for a whole yolk a day.

Measurement of the yolks for chickens is not so exact. University poultrymen say from two to six eggs in a gallon of milk will suffice to produce desired results. Here the eggs may be infertile.

Cod liver oil, also, has met the requirements of both physician and poultryman for preventing leg weakness, according to the University Agricultural Department.

Fundamental Differences in the Make-Up of the Farmer, Labor and Communistic Groups Will Wreck N. York Convention

ST. PAUL, June 18—The issue which has developed at the third party convention here is so fundamental that it may wreck the efforts of the farmer, labor and communistic groups to get together in a national political organization.

On the one side are the vowed communists who while denying that they are financed or controlled by the Moscow internationale openly proclaim themselves fraternizing with it in the same sense that the chamber of commerce of the United States is affiliated with the international chamber of commerce and European business organizations. On the otherside are the radicals who used to belong to the Socialist party and who want Socialization programs and methods similar to the British labor party.

"I am not a Communist," said Duncan McDonald, former head of the Illinois miners' union, "but if a man wants to be one that's his business. It would be a great mistake, however, to try to make this a Communistic convention and I feel confident even the Communists realize that this would be an error. I am here in the hope that we can form a national organization. I was in the Socialist party for years. I have been floundering about in recent years, looking for a national organization in which I could honestly go. I went the other day to southern Illinois where there are 75,000 miners out of work. The destitution is terrible. Something must be done and perhaps we can influence that action by the steps we take here.

Mr. MacDonald is being mentioned for the presidential nomination in the event that Senator La Follette refuses to run on the platform adopted but he talks as if he, too, would decline to be a candidate on an out and out Communist platform.

It is easy to smile at the various delegates who are in attendance here, their uncouth appearance, their secert conferences and their vagaries. But sneers and smiles will not crush the movement nor keep it from extreme programs. Most of the men here are the old time soapbox orators who have the courage of their convictions. Underneath it all, however, they are not as violent as they look. They are not as keen for the Soviet system as they appear to be on the surface. They have the some cupidity, the same selfishness and the same political maneuvers which are characteristic of all political conventions.

Undoubtedly there is a good deal of foreign influence here. The example of the British labor party is held up constantly as are the group tactics of the French Socialists. Schemes of representations are proposed here which differ materially from the methods of the Republican or Democratic parties.

The writer talked with Thomas Walter Mills, one of the chief La Follette supporters here who is called a conservative because he opposes Communism. Mr. Mills has been several years in Great Britain, Australia and the continent studying the Labor movement. He used to be active in the old "Greenback party" and insists that it was captured by men not in sympathy with it and that no such fate shall befall any new party organized here or in Cleveland.

"The basis of representation," he said, "should be farmers' organizations and trade unions. Political committees should be organized which are truly representative of all farmer and labor bodies. We have no such representation here and that's why I am opposed to taking definite action here. We should wait on the Cleveland conference."

Mr. Mills' idea of occupational representation is in the main acceptable to the majority of the delegates but the Communists wish to have several representatives in the national executive committee from the Workers party of America and affiliated organizations. Under the scheme proposed here the control of the party could never be wrested from the managers by a direct primary in which everybody would participate. The radicals themselves know how easily they captured the machinery of the Republican and Democratic parties in western states by tactics of that kind. They mean to retain control by limiting voting inside the party to duly accredited delegates from workers and farmers' organizations. It is significant that there are no labor leaders of national prominence here. The American Federation of Labor is not represented. Samuel Gompers has never accepted the principle of a labor party as a political instrumentality and that is one of the reasons why, no matter what is done here it will still represent a minority of the laboring men in the country. There are some radical leaders in attendance like Alexander Howatt, of Kansas, William Z. Foster of steel strike fame and Duncan MacDonald, of Illinois, but on the whole the large farm bodies and the biggest labor groups have ignored this convention.

Whom do the delegates represent? Mostly minorities in all the labor and farmer organizations but they hope in time to gain power over their conservative brethren by an attractive program that will pull the rank and file from their present leaders. Some of the men here are no doubt ambitious to gain control of national labor organizations for their own purpose.

Some of them are "parlor Socialists" interested in the theory of radicalism and some of them are honestly convinced that with the turn of the tide in Europe there may be an era of extreme radicalism on this side. But the convention is builded for the most part on hope rather than the strength of constituent organizations.

CURTIS E. McBRIDE

The Bellville Star, speaking about the candidacy of C. E. McBride of Mansfield, for nomination for Representative in Congress for the 17th District, says:

"To select a congressman to represent us among the body of lawmakers in Washington, will soon be the duty and privilege of the voters of the 17th District. Mr. C E. McBride has filed his name as Democratic candidate for Representative in Congress for the 17th District. It will be of interest to us to know something about the lives of the men who are asking us to select them to take these important places in the political life of our country.

"Sixty six years ago, on a farm in Richland County, Mr. McBride was born, and spent his boyhood days. He entered the country schools and then went to Wooster University All his life he has been active in the politics of the county. The subject of our story has a legion of friends and loyal supporters who are unanimous in their desire for his success.

"The Democratic Central Committee and the Executive Committee, and the Jefferson Club of Richland County, are all his loyal supporters.

"The practice of law in Mansfield has given Mr. McBride a keen insight into the study of people and government. He is well prepared to take upon himself the responsibility of representing the people of this District in Congress. His wide acquaintance with the people here, and his knowledge and information which are the result of years of study and experience, have fitted him admirably for this position of stewardship. Perhaps there is no public official of more importance to us than our congressman. It is both the duty and the privilege of the voter to become acquainted with the congressman from his district. He is our Representative, and is ready to hear the voice of the people in such matters as relate to his public duty. Mr. McBride is easy to approach, and is always keenly interested in hearing what people desire, and wishes to follow out as near as possible whatever is best for the community he represents.

"Perhaps there has never been a time in the political history of our Nation when men of character and experience are so needed in the shaping of our political affairs. Now is the time for the voter to inform himself, (and herself) as to the candidate who can best represent this District in Congress. In these respects Mr. McBride's life record speaks most eloquently for him.—Pol. Adv.

DISTANT STATIONS HOLD APPEAL FOR FANS

Actual Reception Not As Good As Local Stations

BY CARLTON E. BUTLER
Radio Engineer

The DX fan who nightly twirls the dials in search for distant stations is missing something. When you ask him if he heard the excellent number that was given at the local broadcasting station the previous night he draws up with an air of distian and says, "I never listen to local stuff."

The fields are always greener on the other side of the fence and the pot of gold lies at the end of the rainbow, just over the hill. The station five hundred miles away has much better programs than the station fifty miles has.

This attitude seems to be characteristic of a great many radio fans. Perhaps the thrill of hearing a strange announcer or the achievement of reaching out has something to do with this, but quality and real enjoyment from a purely materialistic viewpoint evidently is not considered.

Signals from distant stations are always considerably weaker than local or nearby stations. This makes reliable reception a difficult matter for anyone but the owner of a powerful set or a skillful operator. Due to the fact that signals are weaker the distant program will be marred with static disturbances and interference from other sources

Local stations can be brot in on a loud speaker without forcing the tubes to a point where static and other forms of interference become annoying. The signal strength is so much greater that the station can be readily tuned in, and enjoyed.

The DX (long distance) fan is everywhere In the city where the station you are trying to receive is located, there are a goodly number of radio fans striving to listen to the program being broadcasted from your local station. Familiarity breeds contempt and this old saying is certainly true of radio.

Murder Story Found Untrue

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 18—What at first appeared to be a film colony murder mystery based on a story told to authorities by Norris Nodler, 21, convicted gangster, that Count Miguel Escoto, film actor and Spanish nobleman, and who was declared to be an intimate friend of a well known screen actress, had been murdered, was blasted here today when Count Escoto was found in a local apartment house.

Nodler's story was that the nobleman had been murdered and his body buried on the beach along the ocean, near Oceanside, between here and San Diego. Authorities had searched along the beach for two days.
